What can we conclude about shorter windows?

Fewer false alarms can be a real benefit

But fewer alarms can also mean fewer directly detected anomalous samples.

PA changes what receives credit

A single crossing can credit a whole event; raw F1 counts individual samples.

Keep the two conclusions separate

Better PA F1 does not necessarily mean better point-by-point detection.

Signal shape is a possible contributor; the matched controls show that method and evaluation also matter.